Dear Mrs. Tafe:

I wish to thank you for your kindness in sending me the copies of your "Bulletin." I have read them with great interest, and quite agree with you that there is no connection between the Matthew Cartwright line of Maryland, and the Cartwrights of Lower Norfolk and Princess Anne County, Va., unless it is that John Cartwright, father of Matthew, was the common ancestor.

I have heard it stated that the father of Thomas Cartwright, Sr., who first appears in the records of Lower Norfolk, about 1650 was a son of John, who settled in James City, Va., in 1623. I have never been able to find verification of this however, as the records of Williamsburg, the County seat of James City, unfortunately have been destroyed. There was such a person as John of James City Co., for his name appears as a witness on the will of John Rolfe.

The first Thomas was married twice. His second wife was Alice, who was tried for witchcraft and acquitted. Thomas, Jr., in a petition to the court refers to her as "my mother-in-law," evidently meaning step-mother. Thomas Jr., got into trouble in Lower Norfolk and left the County. This is brought in a petition of his father to the court asking to be released of a heavy bond which he was forced to put up as security for his son's good conduct. The first wife of Thomas, Jr., was named Mary. We think she was a daughter of John Salmons (or Sammons) who preferred the witchcraft charge against Alice Cartwright. He had a daughter of that name, and the whole affair bears the earmarks of a neighborhood and family quarrel. A later deed executed by Thomas Jr., does not carry the Wife's signature. She was probably dead. Thomas Jr., evidently left Virginia and went to Pasquotank County, N.C. for his will is probated in that county in 1704. He married, the second time, a widow Trueblood. In her will she mentions Trueblood children.

The sons of Thomas junior were William, John, Thomas, Robert, and Job. Robert remained in Virginia and returned there for he purchased land on the eastern shore of Elizabeth River, in the same locality where Thomas senior had patented land. Robert married Ann Shipp, daughter of Francis Shipp, son of William Shipp. His sons were William, Thomas, and John. William married Mary Keeling, daughter of Thomas Keeling and a descendant of Ensign Thomas Keeling. Their only son was Robert, who emigrated to Tennessee via North Carolina. Robert's first wife was Ann, daughter of Robert Huggins, and his second and third wives were sisters, Mary and Pembroke Hunter, daughters of Capt. John Hunter and Jacomine (Johnson) Hunter.

I am descended from Jacob Cartwright, son of Robert and Pembroke. Pembroke Hunter had a distinguished ancestry. Her lines included those of Johnson, Langley, Thelaball and Mason.

(here Bible record ends)

There are however three pther sons of this marriage whose names, and date of birth, are not given in the family record, viz: Robert, David, and Jessie Cartwright. Jesse (or Jessie) the youngest member of the family, went to Texas.

The third wife of Robert Cartwright - Penny or Pembroke Hunter, is believed to have been a sister of his second wife, Mary Hunter.

It appears that from the three marriages of Robert Cartwright, seventeen children were born. As to the offspring of the first and second marriages, nothing is known except the tragic death of John Hunter, who was killed by Indians in 1780. The other children - one son and four daughters, probably married and remained in Virginia.

The above record is taken from the family Bible, now in possession of one of the descendants of one of his daughters."
(Loaned for copy by: Mrs. James I. Cartwright, of Terrell; original data supplied by Mrs. Lem Preston.)

Note: According to James A. Cartwright, Robert 1722, is the son of William, not John. (See letter p. 338.)

Interesting Story of
ROBERT CARTWRIGHT - - VALIANT PIONEER

As published in the NASHVILLE BANNER of August 8th, 1914.
AUTHOR: I have been told that the data for this paper was compiled by the wife and son of Judge Andrew Cartwright of Nashville, Tenn. and descendants.

One of the most interesting points along the proposed route of the Tennessee and Kentucky Interurban, is the grave of Robert Cartwright one of Tennessee's earliest pioneers. The graveyard is situated on a high hill about ten miles from the city of Nashville on the Dickerson Road. On the same hill are the traces of the foundations which mark the site of his permanent dwelling on this land which he entered, and which is still in the family's possession.

Robert Cartwright was one of the first settlers at Wautauga, and took a leading hand in governmental affairs, and all movements that pertainedd to the interest of the settlers. He had a large family of children and many of his descendants are residing in Nashville and vicinity at the present time.

The Cartwright Family itself is exceedingly ancient. It dates back in England to the Norman conquest, and records show ten Coats of Arms granted at various times. The family in America, dates back to 1623, when John Cartwright removed from England to James City County, Virginia where he established a vast estate.

The Coat of Arms is described as follows: "Erm, afess between three fireballs sa., crest - a wolf's head erased, or pierced through the neck with a spear arg. Motto: "Defend the Fold."

Robert Cartwright was born in the year 1722, in Princess Anne County, Virginia. Records state that he was a man of education and prominence. He occupied positions of civil authority that were only granted to the landed gentry prior to the Revolution. In 1745 he was married to Anne, daughter of Robert Hugins. She lived one year after her marriage. In 1750, he married Mary, daughter of John Hunter. She died in 1764. He then married Pembroke Hunter, supposed to be a sister of his second wife although there are not available records by which this can be established. In 1763, he removed to Currituck County, North Carolin, and to do this he obtained a pass signed by the vestrymen of this county, stating that he had an inclination of travel, "is well off in land and negroes, is an honorable man, behaving himself as he ought to." Later he secured another pass, and moved into Orange County. There he became acquainted with the Hendersons, Harts, and Boones, from whom he learned of the vast possibilities of the land beyond the mountains. He then joined the Alamance emigration without a pass for the Wautauga Settlement.

SIGNS COMPACT

While at Wautauga he was one of the number to sign a compact of ~~fgxxxr~~ government drawn up in opposition to the British. This document antedated the Declaration of Independence by several years, and the government established under it was the first act set up in this country openly opposed to the power of the Crown. Later he signed a pact of the same nature, providing for the maintenance of law and order in the Cumberland Settlements.

He evidently remained at Wautauga several years, for he was present at the 4th of July celebration in 1777 - which lasted for two weeks. Many Indian Chiefs were entertained. Land was bought from them, and treaties signed. However, these were the same Indians who later were armed by the British to make war on the settlers. In 1779 he joined the party led by Col. John Donalson, which set out by river from Fort Patrick Henry, for the Robertson settlement at the FrenchLick; now Nashville. The journey occupied about three months during which they endured untold hardships. The winter of 1779 is considered the coldest in the history of this section. The Cumberland river froze solid for miles. The shoals hindered travel, and the rapids were continually overturning the smaller boats, spilling their occupants, together with the goods, into the river. On both banks they were pursued by hostile Indians who had orders from their employers (the British) to exterminate this band. A case of smallpox broke out in the party, and the boat on which it developed was immediately abandoned. The savages thinking they had gained a prize, pounced upon it eagerly, but the awful epidemic fastened itself upon them and ravaged their ranks fearfully. Terror-stricken, the Indians scattered, and the settlers were not molested by them for some time.

Mr. Cartwright's elder children were probably left in Virginia. He brought with him John Hunter, Jacob, Thomas, Elizabeth, and Penny. David and Jessie were born here. The family occupied a large boat to themselves. They brought with them a few slaves, and such utensils and implements as were absolutely necessary. He had a brass cannon which was used repeatedly in defense of the boat and later of the Fort. It was exploded during the Lafayette Celebration here. His camp kettle is now in the possession of the Tennessee Historical Society.

The adventurous trip finally closed with the party arriving at Nashville. Some were in favor of going farther but Mr. Cartwright is reported to have said, "I am content to abide here" which conveyed the sentiment of all the women. So deep in the wilderness, beset by wild beasts and wilder men, they "sang the songs of Zion".

Cabins, surrounded by a palisade, were constructed on the Bluffs, and the forest was cleared for the cultivation of corn; however, the Indians interfered with the cultivation of the fields, and drove away all the game, so that a famine ensued.

ATTACKED BY INDIANS

Once while attempting to work the fields in which is now known as Clover Bottom, a small party - among whom were Mr. Cartwright and his seventeen-year-old son, John Hunter, - was attacked by Indians. All escaped but John, who was murdered and scalped. His father, as history states, "being an elderly man, perhaps 55", was given the only horse in the party. He was compelled to fly for his life with the piteous cries of his young son ringing in his years. This young man was one of the first martyrs in the cause of civilization in Tennessee, but no memorial has ever been placed to his name.

The famine finally became so grave, that all who had horses went up to Harrodsburg, Kentucky. On leaving Wautauga Mr. Cartwright brought with him a number of apple trees. These he planted here, but on going to Harrodsburg he took them with him. After remaining there several years, he returned bringing the apple trees. In spite of their many plantings and replantings, they continued to thrive and some of them are still alive.

Once, to meet a necessity, he devised a mill to grind the settler's corn. He used a novel but practical idea of inserting cow-horns in the rim of the wheel. The mill stood on what is known as Page's branch. Mr. Cartwright obtained a large tract of land here. At the time of his death he owned 6000 acres.

His quaint tombstone is still standing, bearing in crude letters the dates of his birth and death, and the epitaph: "A wit's a feather, a Chief's a rod; but an honest man is the noblest work of God". He did valiant service for his country in fighting Indians, and in opening up this vast wonderful country west of the Alleghenies to civilization. Those early settlers who braved the dangers beyond the frontier, gave this country at the close of the Revolution, the Mississippi River for a western boundary.

Robert Cartwright established here one of the most populous families of the South. Some of his descendants have achieved great distinction. Many of them have joined the Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution on his record, but his grave today is practically unknown, and no mark of tribute or respect, has ever been shown it.

John (1602) was witness to will of John Rolfe, of James City Co., Va., March 10, 1621.

John was the son of Abraham Cartwright of Aynhoo, Northamptonshire, England. He came to America in the ship "Adventure" and was the first white man to explore the James River, Virginia.

Note: Perhaps William Cartwright instead of Abraham.

Cartwright ...

Note: John Cartwright was in the Sir George, or Argall Yeardley muster in 1624; he witnessed the will of John Rolfe in May 1621. Thomas and John were in Lower Norfolk County before 1660. Thomas, or his son went to Pasquotank County by 1695. He had a controversy with the Therrill estate in New England before 1700, the Therrills went there from Pasquotank. Robert of Thomas came back to Princess Anne, and through his line they married into the Dr. William Hunter, lime, the Langley, The la balle, Huggins, & c., leaving here just before the Revolution, stopping in North Carolina into Tennessee, and are represented today in Judge Cartwright's son J.A. Cartwright, an engineer. The family has always been prominent, both for deeds done, and as one of the original settlers on Nashville. The local D.A.R. chapter is named for Robert.

In the North Carolina records there is a long line with Bible names repeating themselves through the generations. I have no thing of interest to tell you of Sampson because he was not in the line I was preparing. There were Hosea, Daniel, Moses, Sampson, &c.

Mr. M. Drexel Rutherford,

Wheaton, Illinois

Dear Mr. Rutherford:

In answering your letter about the Cartwright family, my grandfather, Samuel Cartwright, was the son of Charles and Elizabeth Pardin Cartwright and was born in Rockbridge County, Virginia, May 10, 1815. He emigrated to Indiana and my father, James Wesley Cartwright, was born in Indiana. My father was a Doctor of Medicine and settled in Payne (Paulding County), Ohio. He married Florence Nightingale McLauchlin July 19, 1882, and they had three sons: Dale Pierce (deceased), Emor Lopp, and Glenn Edon Cartwright.

My mother, during her life, had a booklet published giving the Cartwright family tree. We moved sometime ago and I have been unable to find the booklet.

We were in England in May 1954, but did not visit Aynhoe Park. We had intended to but learned that Mr. Cartwright and his son had been killed in a motor crash.

If I learn anything further I will let you know.

Sincerely yours,

Emor L. Cartwright

Dear Dr. & Mrs. Cartwright:

Recently, while in London, the conductor of the Clark Travel Service Ltd. gave me a booklet illustrating the Manorhouse of the Cartwrights of Aynhoe, Oxfordshire. I have been in England several times and much of the time I spent in doing research for myself and others on the background of several families. One of these is the Cartwright family who came to Virginia in the very early days, about 1622 or 23 I believe.

The Order of the First Families are compiling a book listing the names of the early founders and original emigrants to Virginia and I would like to include the Cartwrights, but would need a little more information which might be secured in England.

If you have heard of any published family histories or records which might determine which of the many Cartwright families of England are represented by the Virginia branch I would appreciate your forwarding this information to me.

I understand that the conductor or manager of the Clark Travel Service has a home in the vicinity of Aynhoe, Oxfordshire and it was from him that I received your name.

Very truly yours,

M. D. Rutherford

"C A R T W R I G H T"

Don't you think your Cartwrite line is a F. F. V. eligibility? John Cartwright was living in Elizabeth City Ks. 1623 and Thos. Cartwrite of Princess Ann County, son of Thomas Cartwrite, dec. late of Elizabeth River in the Co. of Lower Norfolk, 23, Feb. 1680. We might find the connecting link, altho Eliz. City records are very few.

Letter of 11/29/1951
I have been working on the Cartwrights but there are two weak links.

1. No where can I find a reference that Thos. Cartwright was a son of John. It is true, we have a statement that Thomas' eldest son was John, which would make us think that Thomas' father was John but is not proof. We do know that Thomas was an old man in 1672, which would also fit in with the supposition that he was a son of John, living in Va. in 1623.

2. Neither can I find a reference that Robert in Norfolk County, Va., was a son of Thomas of N. C. We do know that Thomas (2) left Va. and no doubt, he is the man who died in N. C. leaving a son Robert Who probably came back to Virginia to live. It all seems to fit in but we lack documentary proof.

From the SHIPP data it seems that Sarah wife of William Shipp, was not the mother of his son Francis. Francis Shipp's wife was also named Sarah, Will make further search for the Shipps and Cartwrights.

CARTWRIGHT-SARAH

Miss, Lee, you state Sarah Cartwright, daughter of William d. 1720 or before (is William correct?)

(Wife of Adam Keeling 1696-1771)

Will of Robert (1719) says daughter Sarah K. - wife Ann.

P & W 3 P. 296 Deed and Will Book 4 P 264

p. 311 - 1729

Ann Cartwright Will mentions Sarah K. daughter, also Ann Keeling daughter married John Keeling.

Dear Maj.Shepherd,

About two weeks ago I mailed you some Cartwright notes,also more CAMP material. Mr. Cartwright has,in the mean time,on my request,sent me copies of the two North Carolina wills of which I wrote you. These I am enclosing. Please use them, and if you feel they fit in,that is;that Thomas is father of Princess Anne Robert and is the Thomas who sold out in Princess Anne and went to North Carolina,being son of Thomas and may be Alice.

Please feel free to have copies made if you so desire,returning these with the other papers I sent from my Cartwright file for you to study,when ever it is convenient.

Sincerely,

Lucie Leslie Williams

Princess Anne County,Virginia,D.B.3,page ~~223~~,~~Rec 29 1719~~,dated Oct.15, 1719,proved at Court on Jan.6,1719,is the will of Robt.Cartwright, witnessed by Benediot Horsington,Jn.Cartwright,Jr.,John (X) Turner. The devises are as follows: Eldest son William,youngest son Thomas; the dwelling house,after the death of wife Anne;son John;grandson William cotten;daughter Sarah Keeling;youngest children Thomas,Ann, and Frances (the youngest daughter);very good friend Mr.Christpher Burroughs and Francis Land...sons William and John executors are to take"diligent care of their brother Thomas that he not contract or deal without their consent until he is twenty-one years of age."

Princess Anne County,Virginia,D.B.4,page 311, In 1730,is recorded the will of Ann Cartwright,in which she names son William;son-in-law James Cotten for daughter Katherin's part;daughter Sarah Keeling;daughter Frances Clayden;son John's children;daughter Ann Keeling; sons Thomas and William are executors.

I have a letter from Mr.Cartwright calling my attention to the fact that when we were going over some records at Princess Anne we found Robert Cartwright sueing for wife Anne's part of her father Francis Shipp's eatate. I do not find the date,nor page. I'll pick this up some day when I am at the Court House.

We believed that this Robert was son of Thomas Cartwright,son of Thomas Cartwright the first of Princess Anne by his first wife,not Alice,a later wife,who was sued by Salmons as a witch.
I am attaching my file copies of the Lower Norfolk County items for you to look over,after which take up the following:
Thomas Cartwright and wife Mary sell all they have in Lower Norfolk by 1695 and never appear there or in Princess Anne again.
Thomas Cartwright in 1695 according to a North Carolina petition had land in that Province. This Thomas died in 1707,with a wife Grace,who was a widow Trueblood.
I am sorry,but as I started to copy above,I note I returned to Mr Cartwright the original wills,only making the possibilities suggested by the will.I'll write him for a copy of the Thomas of N.C. and mail you. It looks all right,but we found no deed or writing to say he went from Va. to Carolina,or that Robert who is in Prin ecca Anne was son of a Thomas.

The first we find in Virginia is John Cartwright, included in the muster of Yeardley. You will find this in Hotten's Lists, I think. Then in a photostat I got of Thomas Rolf's will, John Cartwright is a witness.
There is a line of Robert Cartwright in Surry. This I ran till it ended in females in the second generation. They seemed to be friends of the Harrisons of that day in Surry.
Next we founf Thomas and John in Princess Anne. It looks very much as though the elder Thomas in Princess Anne had two sons, Thomas and John. Again, I suggest you read these yellow sheets (return when you take what you want), in the mean time I'll write Mr. artwright for a copy of Thomas dead in 1707, who left among other children, all quite old, there were grandchildren, I believe mentioned, a son Robert Cartwright. It is he whom we believe had may be married Ann, befofe his father went to N.C. and there married Grace, the widow Trueblood.
There is no other generation that interests you, for this Robert and his wife Ann Shipp, were parents of Sarah, wife of Adam Keeling. The first Shipp was William. He had several children whom he brought from England; he claims them as headrights if I mistake not. I did this some time ago, and do not completely remember. There was a son Matthew who went to Eastern Shore and died there without hebrs, devising his estate to brother Francis.
The first William married later the widow of William Julian. Her name was Sarah. He, Julian, was a very important ~~xxxx~~ man in the county, justice &c. Just when the Francis, father of Ann is attached I do not quite know. When I did this it was for the Julian connection and some Maryland lines. I am under the impression that Michael Fentress and his wife Ann are mixed in this relationship, but how, again, I do not know.
Keep the white sheets, but let me have the yellow ones back. I hope they will be of service.
The Cartwrights married up in the world at every step. In the next generation after William, son of Robert, there was a Hunter marriage which I developed into Mason and Thelabelle, the Huguenot; by the last of the eighteenth century we find a Lawson marriage. But, again, this is too late to be of help to you.
It is needless for me to say it is quite late and I am tired. My very poor typing is worse than ever, but I did want to get this off to you as I am going away next week and shall not get a chance at this for at least two weeks.
The Camp notes have possibilities. Do you have suggestions ? I have made no effort to put two and two together, have I ?

Sincerely yours,

Lelia Scott Nelson

WAR DEPARTMENT
United States Engineering Office
Nashville, Tennessee

Dear Mrs. Tafe:

I wish to thank you for your kindness in sending me the copies of your "Bulletin." I have read them with great interest, and quite agree with you that there is no connection between the Matthew Cartwright line of Maryland, and the Cartwrights of Lower Norfolk and Princess Anne County, Va., unless it is that John Cartwright, father of Matthew, was the common ancestor.

I have heard it stated that the father of Thomas Cartwright, Sr., who first appears in the records of Lower Norfolk, about 1650, was a son of John, who settled in James City, Va., in 1623. I have never been able to find verification of this however, as the records of Williamsburg, the County seat of James City, unfortunately have been destroyed. There was such a person as John of James City Co., for his name appears as a witness on the will of John Rolfe.

The first Thomas was married twice. His second wife was Alice, who was tried for witchcraft and acquitted. Thomas, Jr., in a petition to the court refers to her as "my mother-in-law," evidently meaning step-mother. Thomas Jr., got into trouble in Lower Norfolk and left the County. This is brought in a petition of his father to the court asking to be released of a heavy bond which he was forced to put up as security for his son's good conduct. The first wife of Thomas Jr., was named Mary. We think she was a daughter of John Salmons (or Sammons) who preferred the witchcraft charge against Alice Cartwright. He had a daughter of that name, and the whole affair bears the earmarks of a neighborhood and family quarrel. A later deed executed by Thomas Jr., does not carry the wife's signature. She was probably dead. Thomas Jr., evidently left Virginia and went to Pasquotank County, N. C., for his will is probated in that county in 1704. He married, the second time, a widow Trueblood. In her will she mentions Trueblood children.

The sons of Thomas junior were William, John, Thomas, Robert, and Job. Robert remained in Virginia and returned there for he purchased land on the eastern shore of Elizabeth River, in the same locality where Thomas senior had patented land. Robert married Ann Shipp, daughter of Francis Shipp, son of William Shipp. His sons were William, Thomas, and John. William married Mary Keeling, daughter of Thomas Keeling and a descendant of Ensign Thomas Keeling. Their only son was Robert, who emigrated to Tennessee via North Carolina. Robert's first wife was Ann, daughter of Robert Huggins, and his second and third wives were sisters, Mary and Pembroke Hunter, daughters of Capt. John Hunter and Jacomine (Johnson) Hunter.

I am descended from Jacob Cartwright, son of Robert and Pembroke. Pembroke Hunter had a distinguished ancestry. Her lines included those of Johnson, Langley, Thelaball and Mason.

I trust that what I have given you will be of use in connection with the Matthew Cartwright descendants. I shall be glad to be of further help if I can.

In case you know anything of the first John, or if you can put me in touch with anybody who does, I would certainly appreciate it.

Yours very truly,
J. A. CARTWRIGHT.

In accordance with the above letter:
John 1602, settled in James County, Virginia, about 1623.

His son Thomas, m. 1st, unknown
m. 2nd, Alice
(Thomas first appeared on record about 1650).

His son Thomas, Jr., m. 1st, Mary Salmons. (Preferred witchcraft charges against Alice).
m. 2nd, widow Trueblood
Children: William, Thomas, John, Robert, and Job.

His son Robert, m. Ann Shipp
Children: William, Thomas, and John.

His son William, m. Mary Keeling
Children: Robert, b. 1722, who emigrated to Tennessee.

His son Robert, m. 1st, Ann Huggins
m. 2nd, Mary Hunter
m. 3rd, Pembroke Hunter

NOTE—We find again conflicting records. Alexander Cartwright in a letter to Robert L. Cartwright of Waco, states that the sons of Thomas, Jr., are Matthew, Peter, and John. They could be the sons of his first wife, Mary Salmons, however, and the ones mentioned in outline above the sons of the second wife, the widow Trueblood.

	Wm. Hunter	b. Oct. 4, 1773
	Elizabeth	b. Sept. 2, 1776

(here Bible record ends)

There are however three other sons of this marriage whose names, and date of birth, are not given in the family record, viz: Robert, David, and Jessie Cartwright. Jesse (or Jessie) the youngest member of the family, went to Texas.

The third wife of Robert Cartwright—Penny or Pembroke Hunter, is believed to have been a sister of his second wife, Mary Hunter.

It appears that from the three marriage of Robert Cartwright, seventeen children were born. As to the offspring of the first and second marriages, nothing is known except the tragic death of John Hunter, who was killed by Indians in 1780. The other children—one son and four daughters, probably married and remained in Virginia.

Loaned for copy by: Mrs. James I. Cartwright, of Terrell; original data supplied by Mrs. Lem Preston.

NOTE: According to James A. Cartwright, Robert 1722, is the son of William, not John. (See leter p. 338.)

If John 1725-1780 is a descendant of John 1602 who came from Northumberland, England, and sailed for America on the ship Adventure, he cannot also be descendant of Matthew, emigrant, who came to America from the Province of Zealand. They are evidently two separate and distinct lines, for Matthew, emigrant, was born in the Province of Zealand eleven years after John 1602, was settled in Virginia.

Mrs. Ella F. J. Tafe gives her opinion that John 1602, could not be of the Matthew-Peter line, and James A. Cartwright is in agreement, saying there is no connection between the Matthew Cartwright line of Maryland and the Cartwrights of Lower Norfolk unless it is that John Cartwright, father of Matthew, was the common ancestor.

If John 1725-1780 does belong to the Virginia Cartwrights, it is likely that it would be as a descendant of one of the sons of Robert who married Ann Shipp, or of Thomas Cartwright, Jr., who was the grandson of John 1602. Thomas Cartwright, Jr., married first Mary Salmons and they removed to St. Mary's County, Maryland, in 1676, and their sons, according to Alexander Cartwright's letter to Robert L. Cartwright, were: Matthew, Peter, and John. (Perhaps the names enumerated in "an outline p. 339" as the sons of Thomas Cartwright, Jr., namely, William, Thomas, John, Robert, and Job, were the sons of his second wife).

See letter Alexander Cartwright, p. 346.

AGAIN: Robert L. Cartwright states on p. 355 that Matthew 1754-1812, was the son of one of three brothers, Matthew, Peter and John, who emigrated to America from England and settled in Norfolk, Virginia, about 1700. In such case it would seem to be fact, that John 1725-1780 does NOT tie in with either Matthew-Peter line, or John 1602, of James City; but to unknown ancestors in the old country.

Interesting Story of

ROBERT CARTWRIGHT — VALIANT PIONEER

As published in the NASHVILLE BANNER of August 8th, 1914.

AUTHOR: I have been told that the data for this paper was compiled by the wife and son of Judge Andrew Cartwright, of Nashville, Tenn., and descendants.

One of the most interesting points along the proposed route of the Tennessee and Kentucky Interurban, is the grave of Robert Cartwright, one of Tennessee's earliest pioneers. The graveyard is situated on a high hill about ten miles from the city of Nashville on the Dickerson Road. On the same hill are the traces of the foundations which mark the site of his permanent dwelling on this land which he entered, and which is still in the family's possession.

Robert Cartwright, was one of the first settlers at Wautauga, and took a leading hand in governmental affairs, and all movements that pertained to the interest of the settlers. He had a large family of children, and many of his descendants are residing in Nashville and vicinity, at the present time.

The CARTWRIGHT FAMILY itself is evceedingly ancient. It dates back in England to the Norman conquest, and records show ten Coats of Arms granted at various times. The family in America, dates back to 1623, when John Cartwright removed from England to James City County, Virginia, where he established a vast estate.

The Coat of Arms is described as follows: "Erm, afess between three fireballs sa., crest- a wolf's head erased, or pierced through the neck with a spear arg. Motto: 'Defend the Fold.' "

Robert Cartwright was born in the year 1722, in Princess Anne County, Virginia. Records state that he was a man of education and prominence. He occupied positions of civil authority that were only granted to the landed gentry prior to the Revolution. In 1745 he was married to Anne, daughter of Robert Hugins. She lived one year after her marriage. In 1750, he married Mary, daughter of John Hunter. She died in 1764. He then married Pembroke Hunter, supposed to be a sister of his second wife, although there are not available records by which this can be established. In 1763, he removed to Currituck County, North Carolina, and to do this he obtained a pass signed by the vestrymen of this county, stating that he had an inclination of travel, "is well off in land and negroes, is an honorable man, behaving himself as he ought to." Later he secured another pass, and moved into Orange County. There he became acqauinted with the Hendersons, Harts, and Boones, from whom he learned of the vast possibilities of the land beyond the mountains. He then joined the Alamance emigration, without a pass, for the Wautauga Settlement.

SIGNS COMPACT

While at Wautauga he was one of the number to sign a compact of government drawn up in opposition to the British. This document antedated the Declaration of Independence by several years, and the government established under it was the first act set up in this country openly opposed to the power of the Crown. Later he signed a pact of the same nature, providing for the maintenance of law and order in the Cumberland Settlements.

He evidently remained at Wautauga several years, for he was present at the 4th of July celebration in 1777—which lasted for two weeks. Many Indian Chiefs were entertained. Land was bought from them, and treaties signed. However, these were the same Indians who later were armed by the British to make war on the settlers. In 1779 he joined the party led by Col. John Donalson, which set out by river from Fort Patrick Henry, for the Robertson settlement at the French Lick; now Nashville. The journey occupied about three months during which they endured untold hardships. The winter of 1779 is considered the coldest in the history of this section. The Cumberland river froze solid for miles. The shoals hindered travel, and the rapids were continually overturning the smaller boats, spilling their occupants, together with the goods, into the river. On both banks they were pursued by hostile Indians, who had orders from their employers (the British) to exterminate this band. A case of smallpox broke out in the party, and the boat on which it developed was immediately abandoned. The savages thinking they had gained a prize, pounced upon it eagerly, but the awful epidemic fastened itself upon them and ravaged their ranks fearfully. Terror-stricken, the Indians scattered, and the settlers were not molested by them for some time.

Mr. Cartwright's elder children were probably left in Virginia. He brought with him John Hunter, Jacob, Thomas, Elizabeth, and Penny. David and Jessie were born here. The family occupied a large boat to themselves. They brought with them a few slaves, and such utensils and implements as were absolutely necessary. He had a brass cannon which was used repeatedly in defense of the boat, and later, of the Fort. It was exploded during the Lafayette Celebration here. His camp kettle is now in the possession of the Tennessee Historical Society.

The adventurous trip finally closed with the party arriving at Nashville. Some were in favor of going farther, but Mr. Cartwright is reported to have said, "I am content to abide here," which conveyed the sentiment of all the women. So deep in the wilderness, beset by wild beasts and wilder men, they "sang the songs of Zion."

Cabins, surrounded by a palisade, were constructed on the Bluffs, and the forest was cleared for the cultivation of corn; however, the Indians interfered with the cultivation of the fields, and drove away all the game, so that a famine ensued.

ATTACKED BY INDIANS

Once while attempting to work the fields in which is now known as Clover Bottom, a small party—among whom were Mr. Cartwright and his seventeen-year-old son, John Hunter—was attacked by Indians. All escaped but John, who was murdered and scalped. His father, as history states, "being an elderly man, perhaps 55," was given the only horse in the party. He was compelled to fly for his life with the piteous cries of his young son ringing in his ears. This young man was one of the first martyrs in the cause of civilization in Tennessee, but no memorial has ever been placed to his name.

The famine finally became so grave, that all who had horses went up to Harrodsburg, Kentucky. On leaving Wautauga Mr. Cartwright brought with him a number of apple trees. These he planted here, but on going to Harrodsburg he took them with him. After remaining there several years, he returned, bringing the apple trees. In spite of their many plantings and replantings, they continued to thrive and some of them are still alive.

Once, to meet a necessity, he devised a mill to grind the settler's corn. He used the novel but practical idea of inserting cow-horns in the rim of the wheel. The mill stood on what is known as Page's branch. Mr. Cartwright obtained a large tract of land here. At the time of his death he owned 6,000 acres.

His quaint tombstone is still standing, bearing in crude letters the dates of his birth and death, and the epitaph: "A wit's a feather, a Chief's a rod; but an honest man is the noblest work of God." He did valiant service for his country in fighting Indians, and in opening up this vast wonderful country west of the Alleghenies to civilization. Those early settlers who braved the dangers beyond the frontier, gave this country at the close of the Revolution, the Mississippi River for a western boundary.

Robert Cartwright established here one of the most populous families of the South. Some of his descendants have achieved great distinction. Many have joined the Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution on his record, but his grave today is practically unknown, and no mark of tribute or respect, has ever been shown it.

JOHN (1602) was witness to will of John Rolfe, of James City Co., Va., March 10, 1621.

John was the son of Abraham Cartwright of Aynhoo, Northamptonshire, England. He came to America in the ship Adventure, and was the FIRST WHITE MAN to explore the James River, Virginia.

NOTE: Perhaps William Cartwright instead of Abraham.

SKETCH OF ROBERT CARTWRIGHT

Robert Cartwright was 58 years old when he came to the Cumberland. From papers found in the Historical Collection at Nashville, it appears that he was a Sheriff's Deputy in Princess Anne County, Va., in the year 1758. He was evidently a man having considerable capacity for business, and must have had various and important transactions to engage his attention. There is a formal appointment of Robert Cartwright and others, as Guardian of the Public Peace, on the western shore of Princess Anne County, in 1760.

As an officer under his Majesty, it appears that he in several instances complied with the requirements of that Act of the British Parliament which caused such a commotion in the Colonies, and became one of the measures which produced the war of the Revolution. We allude to the Stamp Act.

The curious may be interested and amused by an examination of one of the old documents left by Mr. Cartwright, such as a Proclamation against an "outlying slave named Joe, doing mischief in the reign of our sovereign Lord, King George III.," concluding, "God Save the King!"

The following order contains some information relating to local matters in Davidson County: "By order of the court Robert Cartwright is appointed to oversee the clearing out so far as White's Creek, to Manaker's station, the road as lately laid out by Heden Wells and Company, and that those living at Daniel Fraziers, Samuel Watkins, William Means, and William Coon's and all within said bounds, work there under said direction of said Cartwright, in clearing out said road.

Andrew Ewing
Test. Clerk Davidson County

The above extracts taken from a sketch by Putman, (former President of the Tennessee Historical Society) are found in documents among the archives of the Tennesse Historical Society at Nashville. He was born in Princess Anne County, Va., in the year 1722. About the year 1763-4, he removed to Currituck County, North Carolina, and subsequently came with John Donaldson's party to the French Salt Lick, on the Cumberland, arriving there April 24, 1780.

Robert Cartwright died in 1809, and was buried on the old homestead on Dry Creek near Goodlettsville, Davidson County.

Upon his tombstone is this epitaph:

"A wit's a feather, a chief a rod,
An honest man, the noblest work of God."

"His son James Cartwright, b. Feb. 14, 1770, lived and died in or near Gallatin, Tenn.; and was the grandfather of James Cartwright Warner, and Mrs. McLaughlin, and Mrs. Hord."

"Mrs. Cunningham of Nashville, a descendant of Robert Cartwright, lives at the old Robert homestead. She says that Roberts' father was William, and that John 1602, was the son of William of Annahoo, not Abraham."
